

My experience of learning a second foreign language

At the age of 15 , I decided to start learning English and connect my life with it . When I entered the university, I found out that I would have to start learning a second foreign language. It was French. At that time I didn't know anything about him, neither the alphabet nor the numbers. I was very afraid that I would not be able to cope, because firstly it is a rather complex language, and secondly I did not speak my first foreign language at a sufficiently good level. And I had no interest in learning French either.

I started learning French from the second year and now I have been learning it for a little more than two years . During this time, I learned a lot about it. When I learned to read and write correctly, learned grammar, I realized that although it is a complex language, it is quite beautiful and melodious. In the classroom, we often learn songs and poems, this is an interesting experience for learning the culture of the country of the language being studied. I also participated in French-related events several times. Unfortunately, I have no communication with native speakers. I would really like that, because I have a bad conversational French.

Now more and more often I am worried that my classmates know more than me, which means that I do not devote enough time and effort to learning French. Also, in addition to studying at the university, I need to study this language on my own and learn more vocabulary and grammatical rules. The most important thing is that I have motivation, I want to speak this language fluently.

I am sure that I could know French much better if I were less lazy and would devote more time and effort to learning it. I hope that when I graduate from university I will be proficient in this language at a high enough level.
